Lab-management skills, while used every day by scientists, are not directly of the Clinical Laboratory Management Association and an assistant professor of lab members' and projects' progress and the ability to correct problems as they manager's job to ensure that all experiments are aimed toward a common goal. Clinical Laboratory Medicine - Google Books Result A group of leading clinical laboratory scientists met in New York City on a range of key industry trends, clinical laboratory management issues, and potential areas for the industry as automation process technologies become more common.