Maternal control of early embryogenesis in mammals - ResearchGate
This requires additional extra-embryonic tissue to assist in the implantation. Therefore in early embryonic development, mammals spend time forming these extra-embryonic tissues. The process is termed embryogenesis. The mammalian blastocyst - Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center.